CANNOT POSTPONE CARNIVAL

ELKS MUST CARRY OUT THEIR PROGRAMME.

Special Memorial Day Programme May Be Arranged—Indians Arrive for the Carnival.

The death of the president will not interfere with the plans for the Elks' street fair and carnival. The question of postponing for abandonment the event was discussed yesterday when news came that the chief executive was dying, but it was finally decided to continue as planned.

It is realized that President McKinley's demise will cast a serious damper on the festivities, but so much money has already been expended in preparations that to stop now would seriously cripple the lodge's finances.

The lodge has decided to continue the general mourning during the carnival, that day will be observed within the enclosure by an appropriate programme.

It is a fact not generally known that President McKinley desired to be an Elk. His application went to the lodge and he was elected, but was never initiated.

INDIANS ARRIVE.

Band of Braves and Squaws From the Reservation.

The advance guard of the carnival attractions is here in the shape of the band of Indians from the Utah reservation, promised by Major H. P. Myer.

The latter has been in Salt Lake City with his wife and boy since Thursday, preparing for their arrival.

Early in the afternoon forty braves and squaws ambled into the city, their camping grounds within the carnival enclosure. They were equipped with bows and arrows, and dressed in well as store clothes, and came in gala attire, prepared to have a good time.

Provo and several of the Indian police were in charge. The contingent, it is asserted, is the first to leave the reservation for a long time.

They are prepared to take part in the parades in full war regalia. After a masquerade passed along Main street in Indian attire, creating the impression that the reds had left their new reservation.

ELKS NEWS.

Ogden Office, 203 Eccles Building. Telephone 14.

WILL MAKE TENDER.

Council to Pay $24,568 to W. C. Weaver.

The Ogden City council last night voted to tender a warrant for $24,568.37 to W. C. Weaver, receiver of the Bear River Irrigation & Ogden Waterworks company, as payment for the judgment recently secured in the federal court against the city, together with costs and interest. Councilmen Carr, Emmett and Fowles were absent, and Jones voted against the proposition.

The latter stood for answering the writ of mandamus recently issued from the federal court by setting up that the city has no funds with which to pay the judgment and is without money of law to levy a special tax. Jones' resolution to this effect failed to pass, and the plan recommended by Judge Hille special counsel for the city, was adopted.

It is doubtful if the receiver will accept a warrant in payment, but will insist on having cash. However, it relieves the city for a time and makes the receiver the receiver to make the next move.
